MAY FIGHT "OLEO" LAW

KINGAN & CO. AND ARTHUR JORDAN & CO. OPPOSE THE MEASURE.

There is Growing Talk of Injunction Proceedings to Test the Law-Kingan Man Talks.

The big oleomargarine plants of Indianapolis, Kingan & Co., Arthur Jordan & Co., and many others, are not taking kindly stringent oleomargarine law recently passed by Congress. It was rumored in the wholesale district yesterday that and was accidentally killed. representatives of the two larger companies had been conferring on the advisability of resisting the law by the injunction process until its constitutionality could be ascertained by a test case. It a piece of class legislation, and as such utterly unconstitutional. The belief is growing that the administration of the law will be resisted in the courts. A prominent official of Kingan & Co., while not consenting to the use of his name, discussed the effects of the law and the probable action of the companies in the future. While declaring that Kingan's is not ready to take the question into the courts yet, he did not deny that action of that sort might be taken at some future time.

"The congressional enactment," he said, "forbids companies in the business of manufacturing oleomargarine the privilege of coloring the product. I say forbids, because a duty of 10 cents a pound is placed on the colored article, which is equivalent. We consider the bill unjust and unfair in that it savors of class legislation. The law was boosted by the dairy interests of the country and passed because of their influence. If the matter is taken into court it will be on the theory that the government has no right to favor one industry at | $511.55 and costs; also decree of foreclosure the expense of another when both are en- of mortgage and judgment against defendgaged in legitimate business."

"I have heard a great deal of talk," he said. "I know nothing definite. I should say that nothing would be done at the present time, although I cannot speak for the future. However, the company may not act at any time for this reason: We think the people will realize more and more that oleomargarine is just as pleasant and healthful as the colored article, and will eventually come to buy it in such quantities that the dairy interests will find they have overreached themselves. We expect in time to sell the white in such quantities that the operation of the law will not

HOTEL LOBBY GLEANINGS

INDIANAPOLIS SCHOOL SYSTEM RE-CEIVES HIGH PRAISE.

E. R. Smith Says Manner of Selecting the School Board Is Admirable-Hotel Visitors.

"It seems to me that the people of Indianapolis scarcely appreciate the distinction the city has achieved because of some of its educational features," said E. R. Smith, general traveling agent for a large book concern, at the Hotel English last night. "It is true the schools of Indianapolis have long been celebrated for their excellence, but one feature has recently been added that makes this city a model for the whole United States. I may say that of the larger cities of the East and middle West | were cited to appear in court yesterday or I know of none that is not now contemplating a change to the Indianapolis plan, or at least considering it. I think the Indianapolis board is the most dignified and business-like I have ever met. The experience of other cities that have tried similar plans show that the success of the Indianapolis movement is due in large measure to the fair treatment it has had at the hands of the press and political leaders. They have encouraged its every good feature. There is but one improvement I could suggest. Instead of printing the names of the candidates for school ommissioner in a column on the ticket, would have them printed in a circle, radiating like the spokes in a wheel. Then there would be no head to the ticket and no candidate would have this advantage of position. The Indianapolis School Board differs from the boards in other cities chiefly in the number of members elected and in the manner of choosing them. Some cities have as many as seventy-two members on their boards of education. These are divided into huge committees, and, of course, to this city in a few days. He was joined the ward politicians and grafters are in the | by his wife yesterday. majority. In the cities where boards are where party nominations are made, there is sure to be an undesirable element elected. This plan is followed by most cities."

HOTEL STENOGRAPHER ANGRY.

Puts on Paper Her Views of Central-Avenue Men.

To put it in her own language, the hotel stenographer was as "mad as a wet hen" yesterday morning. It was all because of what she termed the "impolite men passengers on the Central-avenue car line." The young woman had apparently been in a jam. However, she came downtown wearing a freshly laundered pink waist, a cream-colored stock and dark walking skirt and withal looked as if she had stepped out of a bandbox instead of a crowded street car. "I am mad and I propose to write my views of the men that ride on street cars,"

"The Central-avenue car line carries some of the most impolite men passengers in the whole city of Indianapolis," she wrote. The cars are irregular to start with and | Medley Overture-Introducing: "Flora, passengers (largely ladies) standing along he line waiting patiently, have probably been waiting from fifteen to twenty minutes. While she is trying to board the car the conductor, with a face full of wrinkles, frowns dreadfully because she has delayed the car a moment or two trying to get on. None of the men ever attempts to assist her, but they all sit back and giggle and comment on her. This is invariably the case if the lady happens to be a little ordinarily dressed. Farther down the line should one appear all decked out in her very best for every-day wear all the men will scramble over one another like in a football game to make room for her. All want her to set beside them, and, in fact, she has more room on the car than she could possibly occupy. This is invariably the case, particularly on a rainy day. Everybody using the Central-avenue cars will find that I am correct. It seems to me that some of the men using this line should take a course in good manners as regards the treatment of ladies on street cars. After making a few copies of this mild criticism on Central-avenue men, the
